

Ethical Statement of the Journal of Health and Development

We hereby declare that in the preparation of this manuscript entitled which has been sent to the Journal of Health and Development (the Journal of the School of Public Health, Kerman University of Medical Sciences) none of unethical research practices that have been mentioned below have happened and all authors have read the article and have approved the content and this article has been sent to this journal with the consent of all authors. And if any of these research malpractices have happened the authors are fully responsible and the journal has no responsibility. The journal also has the right to declare the malpractice and retract the article.

1. Data fabrication
2. Falsification or incorrectly reporting the results of research
3. Scientific or literal plagiarism, or cyber plagiarism
4. Defacing or damaging governmental or public property on purpose during research
5. Deleting or manipulating equipment, material, data or research information
6. Threatening or abusing people for reporting other people’s research misconduct
7. Republishing or re-distributing all or part of an published article in another journal, the internet, newspaper, or similar media without inquiring permission from the first publisher or conducting self- plagiarism
8. Coping others people’s research or proposal
9. Threating people for putting them under pressure for getting informed consent
10. Not compensating physical, financial or psychological stress imposed on people participating in research
11. Not including data on side effects in a clinical trial
12. Conducting research on humans without informed consent
13. Not disclosing conflict of interest
14. Using the finances of a research project for other purposes
15. Not complying with the commitments in the research contract
16. Not paying the salary of the people who have been listed in the research contract, although they have fulfilled their job responsibilities
17. Forcing people to add the name of people as authors although not having authorship criteria (Coercion Authorship)
18. Adding the name of famous people to the article authors to increase the credibility of the paper

Name of Authors:

Signature:

Date:

1.
2.
3.
4.
5.
6.
7.
8.
9.
10.

19. Not listing the names of people who were entitled to authorship, as authors
20. Not protecting people from the hazards of research
21. Deceiving or bribing people in order to get them participate in research
22. Not respecting the financial or intellectual rights of organizations or institutions in reporting the results of research
23. Not protecting private information or revealing private information, that puts the participant under financial or psychological stress
24. Not inquiring written consent from the legal guardian of children, mental retards and mentally ill patients
25. Changing other people's statements and expressing them as if they are theirs (Paraphrasing)
26. Using the template of other people's article for their own article, in a way which is considered as copying (Templating)
27. Not having ethic approval
28. Not reporting missing data
29. Ignoring authors without declaring them
30. Publication of post hoc analysis without declaring it data dredging
31. Inefficient or incomplete searching the literature
32. Ethical misconduct with animals
33. Adding other authors name in order to due them a favor (Admiration Authorship)
34. Adding other authors name as a gift (Gift Authorship)
35. Refusing to write the name of a person who is entitled to authorship(Ghostwriting)
36. Not obeying the order of author names(Authorship Misordering)
37. Sending one article to several journals at the same time(Shot Gunning)
38. Dividing the results of a research into several pieces and writing a paper for each without necessity (Salami-Slicing)
39. Not inquiring the consent of all authors and entitled individuals in submitting and publishing research
40. Not respecting the contribution of each author in writing the order of the authors

Meanwhile all authors declare that all regulations of Ethics in Research listed in the Iranian National Ethics Statement in Disseminating the Results of Research in Medical Sciences has been respected and the order of the authors is the same of what has been listed in this form.

Name of Authors:

Signature:

Date:

1.
2.
3.
4.
5.
6.
7.
8.
9.
10.